Dante Alighieri | Books | The Guardian

Purgatorio is the second part of Dante's Divine Comedy, following the Inferno, and preceding the Paradiso. The poem was written in the early 14th century. It is an allegory telling of the climb of Dante up the Mount of Purgatory, guided by the Roman poet Virgil, except for the last four cantos at which point Beatrice takes over as Dante's guide. Purgatory in the poem is depicted as a mountain in the Southern Hemisphere, consisting of a bottom section, seven levels of suffering and spiritual grow

Until he meets her, Dante, the second-eldest Guardian of the White and an Immortal, has spent more than a thousand years destroying the Demons and Shadows that walk among us. After so many years of fighting, he has lost his compassion for humans and only finds pleasure in his art, his lovers, and killing Demons.

Dante-Part 1 (Guardian Archives, #2) by Jennifer Sage

Dante describes Cato as having a long grizzled beard and graying hair falling down over his chest in two tresses; his face is illuminated by starlight (as if he were facing the sun). As the warden or guardian of the mountain of Purgatory, Cato performs a role somewhat similar to that of Charon in Hell. Dante seems to have assigned this prominent role to Cato because he so valued freedom that he gave his life for it (1.71-2): the historical Cato chose suicide over submission to tyranny after ...

Continued from Comparing Dante and Milton, Part 1.. The positive way of Dante conforms to the high scholasticism of his day. Dante, particularly in the Paradiso, conforms to the way in which Thomas Aquinas values philosophy as a true and proper power to prepare the mind for grace (cf. Par. 4.118-32; 29.13-45).
